BACK SIDE

Melanie Evans, artist and owner of Melware Ceramics, started playing in the mud as a child and then crafted a career out of it. She first got her hands on clay while attending highschool in the Central Valley of California and then pursued a collegiate study in the art of Ceramics. After finishing her Bachelor of Arts degree from University of California Chico, she lived in El Salvador for a couple years before returning to school for a graduate degree from Brigham Young University, specializing in Ceramics. She has taught art and ceramics for over ten years. In 2008 Melanie started Melware Ceramics from her home studio. Located 30 miles south of Salt Lake City, her studio view of Utah's landscape and snow capped peaks inspires her art. She continuously makes magnets and ornaments in small batches...like cookies, except they aren't edible and they will never get stale. Each piece is homemade and hand crafted. When she's not at the kiln, Melanie enjoys stress knitting, watching movies, taking deep breaths and spending time with her four favorite little humans.
